Helping to make your workplace safer

Too many New Zealanders continue to be injured or killed at work. We know you want to make your workplace safer for your people, but sometimes you need a hand to make improvements.

Businesses in the construction sector have told us that financial barriers can get in the way of making health and safety improvements. We want to help; we're offering a subsidy to take part in the LeadSafe Supervisors training.

We're offering a workplace injury prevention subsidy for businesses like yours in the construction sector to take part in LeadSafe Supervisors training.

Our offer

If you're a construction business with 6 to 99 employees, you may be eligible for a workplace injury prevention subsidy.

The LeadSafe Supervisors training is endorsed by the Construction Health and Safety Association of New Zealand. We'll contribute 50% of the costs to attend this training up to a maximum amount, depending on the size of your business:

Business size	Business size definition	Our maximum contribution*
Small (6-19 employees)	$348k - $1,234k liable earnings	$1,000
Small - Medium (20-49 employees)	$1,235k - $3,135k liable earnings	$2,700
Medium (50-99 employees)	$3,136k - $6,304k liable earnings	$5,600

*Excludes GST

Our contribution varies according to the size of your business. For example, a medium-sized business has more employees than a small business, so you may need to train more people.
